

PARENT-TEEN DRIVING AGREEMENT

Parents of nearly eight teens a day learn that their child has died in a car crash. In fact, car crashes are the No. 1 killer of teens in America. They cause far more teen deaths than homicide, suicide, cancer and drugs.

According to research from The Allstate Foundation, parents are the most important influence on their teen when it comes to learning to drive before and after their child gets a driver's license. That means you can make a big difference by being a good role model and a good coach.

Start the conversation

Talking to your teen about the rules of the road isn't necessarily easy, but it is important. That's why The Allstate Foundation created this Parent-Teen Driving Agreement. It will help you and your teen make safer decisions when he or she gets behind the wheel and when riding as a passenger with friends. Use it as a resource to:

- Discuss your teen's responsibilities when driving a car or riding as a passenger in a car driven by another teen.
- Decide on responsibilities and the consequences when those responsibilities aren't met.

Once you talk over each issue, fill out the rules and consequences in the space provided. Then sign and date the agreement and keep it in a prominent place in your home so you can re-examine it often and make changes as your teen becomes a more experienced driver.

Learn about your state's teen driving laws, better understand teens' attitudes about driving or get tips for talking with your teen about safer driving. The Allstate Foundation has resources to help make a difference.

Graduated driver licensing laws help new drivers gain experience on the road under supervised and less risky conditions.

In some states that have enacted strong GDL laws, the incidence of teen driving-related deaths has dropped by as much as 40%. The most comprehensive GDL laws include:

- Mandatory behind-the-wheel driving time
- Nighttime driving restrictions
- Limits on the number of passengers in the vehicle
- Cellphone and texting bans
- Minimum entry age for learner's permit
- Minimum age for full licensure

Each state has different teen driving laws, so you and your teen should become familiar with the laws in your state.

Keep in mind that state laws are minimum standards to keep your teen safer on the road. The more you get involved and monitor your teen's driving experience, the more likely your teen will be a safer driver and passenger.
